Top Ten Read Aloud Tips
To Remember When Reading to your Child

1. Spend at least ten wildly happy minutes every single day reading aloud.
2. Read at least three stories a day: it may be the same three stories. Children need to hear a thousand stories before they can begin to read.
3. Read aloud with animation. Listen to your own voice and don’t be dull, or flat, or boring. Hang loose and be loud, have fun and laugh a lot.
4. Read with joy and excitement: real enjoyment for yourself and great joy for the listeners.
5. Read the stories that the kids love, over and over and over again and always read in the same “tune” for each book: i.e. with the same intonations on each page, each time.
6. Let children hear lots of language by talking to them constantly about the pictures, or anything else connected to the book; or sing an old song you remember; or say nursery rhymes in a bouncy way, or be noisy together doing clapping games.
7. Look for rhyme, rhythm or repetition in books for younger children, and make sure the books are really short.
8. Play games with the things that you and the child can see on the page, such as letting kids finish rhymes, and finding the letter that starts the child’s name and yours, remembering that it’s never work, it’s always a fabulous game.
9. Never ever teach reading, or get tense around books.
10. Read aloud every day because you just love being with your child, not because it’s the right thing to do. This is as important for fathers as it is for mothers.

Dear Parent:

The world of independent reading is one of the most satisfying gifts we can give to our children. Although some children may discover this marvelous world on their own, many of them need our help and encouragement. When children discover that reading can be helpful and enjoyable, it becomes a meaningful, necessary part of their lives. They may read because of a hobby or interest, to seek information, or to satisfy their curiosity, but they will read with pleasure.

Our task, then, as adults to whom our children look for example and guidance, is to create favorable conditions for reading. Below are some suggestions for creating a climate that encourages reading.

1. Children follow examples. If they see that books are an important part of your family life, they will want to make them a part of theirs.

2. Children love to be read to. Studies have shown that most successful readers have had parents or brothers and sisters who have read to them.

3. Children appreciate organization. Setting aside a special time for reading - when TV is not permitted as a substitute - is an excellent way to develop a pattern for reading.

The lists which follow have been compiled to aid you in encouraging your child to read. They are not all-inclusive. Although the books are listed under specific grade levels, the interest and ability of your child should be considered when selecting a book.

Book Sharing Questions for Reading At Home

When reading with your child, you can select one or two of these questions to use to discuss a book together.

If you were in the story, how would you feel?

How could you change the ending of the story?

If you were the main character, what would you do at the end of the book?

Tell, write or draw me something you liked or disliked about the book.

How would the story be different if it took place in another setting?

How would you act toward the main character if he/she was one of your friends?

How are you like one of the characters?

Is there anything in the book that surprised you? Confused you? Why?

Can you show me where the author tells you...
